While the studio assures us every effort has been made to notify all parents by mail, the CITIZEN is especially anxious for everyone concerned to be aware of the day, so all will be on hand to express their preference of the proofs to be used for publication or, as the case may be, the one they wish made into personal pictures. MRS. CARL ERMONT CALVIN

CALVIN—WIGHT

On Sunday afternoon, Aug. 31, the little white church at North Newry was the scene of the marriage of Sarah Elizabeth Wight to Carl Ermont Calvin. The church was attractively decorated with white and salmon-pink gladioli.

The double-ring ceremony was impressively performed by the Rev. Harrison Dubbs, pastor of the Congregational Church at Gorham, Maine, which the contracting parties attended during their four years at Gorham State Teachers College.

Mrs. Dubbs as organist and Mrs. Earle Leslie Hunter of New York City and Bull Branch opened the ceremony with "I Love You Truly." The bride and groom were attended by college friends, Harold Malloux and Daniel Wight, brother of the bride, as ushers headed the stately procession. Miss Beatrice Heal, as maid of honor, wore an orchid gown and carried a colonial bouquet of mixed flowers.

The bride wore a lovely gown of white satin brocade and a finger-tip veil, and carried an arm bouquet of white roses trimmed with white satin streamers. Her traveling costume was a gray suit with blue accessories. She was given away by her father, Ernest L. Dow stood as best man to the groom.

Following the church ceremony, about 50 relatives and close friends of the pair gathered at the bride's home for the reception. A delicious, three-tiered cake, made by the bride's mother, was served by Mrs. Daniel Wight, the bride's sister-in-law. Other refreshments were served by Mrs. Donald Malloux and Miss Beryl Calvin, sister of the groom. Mrs. Ernest Dow and Miss Ellen Hamlin attended to the gifts and the guest book. The bride and groom exchanged gifts of a string of pearls and a cigarette lighter.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lou E. Wight of North Newry. She attended the schools of Newry, was graduated from Gould Academy in the class of 1943 and Gorham State Teachers College in 1947.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Calvin of Sanford. He was graduated from Sanford High School in 1943 and Gorham State Teachers College in 1947.

County Fair Promises Full Six Days' Entertainment

With the assurance of every department filled to capacity, entertainment features with the thrill of a three-ringed circus, and all the old-time associations of such an exposition, the Oxford County Fair will open Monday, Sept. 8, for its 100th show, at the fair grounds between Norway and South Paris.

Although the gates will be opened Monday, the fair actually will get underway Tuesday, featuring the time-honored Children's Day, when every child of school age will be admitted free to the grounds. One admission, with the grandstand free, will be charged for Monday when an eight-dash race program will be the feature. Parimutuel betting under the direction of Frank Whitman, post time at 1 p. m.

Roughly the coming fair can be grouped into three sections—the agricultural, dairy, domestic animals and home contests with their attending instructive and informative demonstrations and the display of agricultural and domestic equipment; an augmented program of entertainment from band concerts and horse races to circus acts on the open air stage in front of the newly remodeled grandstand; the occasional attractions of the old-time midway scope, ranging from refreshment stands, riding devices and game, of skill to tented theatres and slideshows.

True to its purpose, Oxford County Agricultural Society is stressing the farm-dairy-home phase of its exhibition, setting apart among these the several farm organizations, such as Grange, Farm Bureau, 4-H Clubs. More space is devoted to the 4-H Club work and the dairy projects of this organization than ever before.

Because of greatly enlarged 4-H Club program, the fair officials have designated Friday a 4-H Club day. Judging of the dairy and parade of the young stock will feature the day's program.

Pulling events will get underway Tuesday afternoon with the program devoted solely to drawing even when four classes will be presented. Purses totalling $100 are offered for these events. On Wednesday, the morning program will feature two classes of oxen drawing, and the afternoon will see the first of the popular horse pulling events.

Three classes will be presented for purses totalling $150. On Thursday the program will feature sweepstakes, classes for oxen in the morning, and special sweepstakes for horses in the afternoon. A total of $250 in purses are offered for the morning events, and a total of $425 in purses will be given for the two classes in the afternoon.

Friday and Saturday afternoons will be devoted to horse pulling events, with two classes presented each afternoon, for a total of $600 in purses.

Each afternoon at 1 o'clock, eight dashes of parimutuel racing will get underway. The invitational events, scheduled for Friday and Saturday afternoons, with purses of $700 each, will feature the week's racing program. A total of $13,200 in purses has been set up by race secretary, Ralph Sturgis.

Horses are already moving onto the grounds from Windsor and Saturday and Sunday will see a regular parade of horse vans moving onto the grounds from Lewiston, so that an unprecedented number of horses will be here for the week.

The newly remodeled grandstand provides better seating facilities, and the modernized parimutuel betting plant underneath the stand has been so constructed that an unobstructed view of the tote board and the race track is provided for the patrons. All of the space in front of the grandstand and parimutuel plant is tarvia covered eliminating the dust of past years.

Vaudeville acts and a band concert will be presented daily, beginning Tuesday. The Norway Community Band, under the direction of Pearl Cook Kilborn, will present a program of music both afternoon and evening. Jay MacCabe will present coast to coast favorites in thrilling and entertaining vaudeville between race dashes in the afternoon, and an hour and a half show each night. The nightly performance will be climaxed with a thrilling fireworks spectacle, "The Battle in the Clouds."

Secretary Elmore C. Edmunds, and Superintendent of the Fair, Oanyma Colby, have received many applications for space in the exhibition hall and they report that in addition to the farm-home-dairy exhibits, the Maine Department of Forestry will exhibit, the Department of Agriculture, and the Maine State Police will have large and instructive exhibits.

Grounds superintendent Frank "Doc" Deoster stated that space on the grounds is being snapped up by concessionaires, and the old time favorites will be here. Fred's heans will occupy its usual place at the head of the midway, while entertainment and thrills will be provided by the Merit shows featuring their mile-of-fun trail.

SWAN—MARSHALL

Sunday morning at 9 o'clock at the residence of Rev. Eleanor B. Forbes, who performed the ceremony, Miss Elizabeth Marshall of Bethel and Raymond J. Swan of Greenwood were united in marriage. The double ring service was used.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Marshall of Bethel. She was graduated from Gould Academy, class of 1946, and is employed at the office of the E. L. Tibbels Spool Co., Locke Mills.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Swan of Greenwood. He attended Gould Academy and served three years and ten months in the U. S. Navy.

They were attended by the groom's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Swan of Greenwood. They will live in Locke Mills.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual—National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

The lead article in Harper's Magazine for August is devoted to the important and much-misunderstood subject of "Negotiating With the Russians." Written by James B. Reston, longtime diplomatic correspondent of the New York Times, it casts a good deal of light on Soviet purposes, Soviet diplomatic techniques, and Soviet mentality.

First of all, says Mr. Reston, "Negotiating with the Russians is like playing tennis on a court without lines or umpire. If the indefatigable Mr. Molotov hits one into the net (as he often does) and cries 'good,' there is nothing you can do about it except argue. If you call in the French, the British, and the Chinese, and they all say, sorry, it went into the net, Mr. Molotov is not only adamant but angry. Did we not agree, he says, on the rule of unanimity?"

To the Soviet mind, this is not apparently, either dishonest or unethical. The Soviet diplomats enter every debate knowing precisely what the result must be. As Mr. Reston, the former Secretary of State, once said to Molotov, "We start with the fact and try to reach true and fair conclusions, while you start with the conclusions you want and try to select and twist the facts to your own ends." But even that, Mr. Reston observes, does not tell all of the story. Russian policy, as shown in the various conferences held since the war, is a mosaic of contradictions. At one time for instance, the Russians were completely opposed to the inclusion of France in the Council of Foreign Ministers, and the first meeting of the Council collapsed, having achieved nothing whatsoever, over this issue. But, at the second meeting of the Council, the Russians demanded that France participate in the discussions. The obvious reason was that they then wanted to make a good impression on the French people, and the Soviet high command could see no reason why it shouldn't abandon its first stand without explanation or comment. This has happened time and time again and of course is a main reason why hundreds of international meetings, of one kind or another have been held without major result.

One more difficulty lies in the fact that the Soviet diplomats even including Molotov, are watched like hawks by Moscow and a statement made by one of them one day may be approved by the Kremlin, the next day it happens, the diplomat simply reverses his position and the arguments start all over again. The representatives of the other powers, naturally find it maddening, but there is nothing they can do about it. Cases are on record where the powers have accepted Soviet demands in all particulars—and then the Russians have vetoed the final draft on some obscure technical question of phraseology.

Mr. Reston gives several enlightening reasons for the Soviet attitude. For one thing, the Russians still feel that they were unjustly treated after World War I, when Allied troops were sent into Siberia, and the major powers refused them formal recognition for many years. The seeds of bitterness which were planted then still flower. Another, and perhaps more cogent reason, is that negotiation in the Anglo-American sense of the word is alien to the Russian mind. In the United States, as an example, labor negotiates with government, the President negotiates with Congress, etc. Negotiation of some sort is our traditional means of settling every difference. In the Soviet Union, to the contrary, everything is done by order, and a sort of gigantic chain-of-command system prevails which no one who values his neck opposes. As Mr. Reston says, "Even Molotov does not 'negotiate' with Stalin."

From the Soviet point of view, the eccentric Soviet diplomatic practices are producing excellent results. Of major importance, they force interminable delay in deciding almost every problem, from the smallest to the greatest. They thus constitute blocking tactics of remarkable effectiveness. And, while the weary talk goes on, the Russian empire extends inexorably outward. Little by little—and perhaps far faster than most of us realize—the Russians are getting what they want.

Mr. Reston is too able and experienced an observer to offer any pat solution to the problem of negotiating with the Russians. Indeed, his whole article is designed to show that pat solutions are worthless. He simply observes that, whether we like it or not, there are almost 200,000,000 Russians in the world, and they have a very high birth rate. It is obviously impossible to ignore them, and few people want to fight them if a fight is unavoidable. Perhaps, through trial and error, some workable basis of negotiation between the Eastern and Western worlds will eventually be reached. But it looks like a long, tough job, and many more setbacks must be expected.

Trouble in Britain

England has gone down for a small count. That of course is no reason why anybody should be ready with the old "told-you-so." However, some observations are in order. Outstanding Englishmen have been outspoken during the fuel crisis, current in their country. An examination of the underlying causes of the crisis in England ought to make a good treatise favoring the American economic system.

In England or anywhere else in the world, it is my feeling that little or nothing along the socialist order is to be found there that we would wish to adopt in America. Even before the coal and power crisis reached the terrible proportions of mid-February, the British were being urged by critics within their own realm to abandon plans for further nationalization.

National Suicide
Mr. Shinwell, minister of fuel and power, along with Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, asked that the country forego any further reorganization of the electric power industry. The idea behind their plea was that British industry could not afford to be exposed to the uncertainties and hazards that would accompany more experimentation. It was time for danger signals to go up.

The government, it was stressed, would have to concentrate on the task of preserving the economic life of England. Another warning came from a prominent religious leader. The English people were confronted, he said, by immense danger in the planned society becoming so common. If more and more orders had to be issued "about which the people would have to put up with and obey," it would be the beginning of national suicide.

Result of Planning
The British do not lack coal because they have no plan. Socialism is full of plans. The coal mines are there, too. What socialism forgets, however, is that private and personal initiative, meaning hard work and high production, make up the factors that insure economic stability. English miners can never dig coal with paper plans. Men dig and distribute coal to consumers of fuel largely because of various incentives.

Not the least of these incentives is that men make money in the process of getting the coal out of the ground. But a nation does not get rid of monopoly by making the monopoly one of government. The prime products of socialism and communism, with their monopolies of government, have been low standards of living and meager production.

Best Statesmanship
Thing to remember is that no anti-trust laws can reach this kind of monopoly. It takes either revolution or world conflict to sweep out failures of monopolistic government, once they become entrenched by long habit.

Responsibility falls with increasing weight upon America. These duties lie most fully now in the part we must play of making our free and dynamic economy, without taint of socialistic experimentation, the example for the whole world. In that way can the American people perform their best statesmanship.

NAVY WILL ICE-TEST JET FIGHTER PLANE THIS WINTER IN FRIGID BLASTS ATOP MOUNT WASHINGTON

The Navy will ice-test a P-51 Mustang, jet-fighter airplane, by exposing it to the frigid blasts on top of Mount Washington, New Hampshire, highest peak on the East Coast, this winter.

The 6,288 foot site was selected because of the severe icing conditions it breeds along with the 150-an-hour winds that sweep through that part of the White Mountains. It is also unique in the United States in that it bears vegetation similar to that of the Arctic Regions.

A primary object of the test will be to correlate engine and wing icing conditions in order to determine whether the jet engine under operating conditions or the plane's wings will ice-up first. Engineers from the Aeronautical Engineering Laboratory, Naval Air Materiel Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and the Aircraft Icing Research Laboratory of the Wright Chamberlain Company, Minneapolis, Minnesota, will conduct the tests.

The plane will be secured in a flat-topped "Butler" building to be erected on top of the mountain. The building will be open at both ends to form a natural wind tunnel when the tests are run, and will be closed during non-test periods to protect the engineers from the severe winter of Mount Washington, where the thermometer sometimes drops to 40 degrees below zero.

Although the actual tests will not get underway until later, construction of the building is scheduled to be completed by mid-September. After that time, the winds and weather will become so severe for the

OPENING DELAYED

AT U. OF M.

The opening of classes at the University of Maine will be delayed two weeks this fall in order that housing, classroom, and other facilities necessary to accommodate the greatly increased enrollment may be in readiness, the Board of Trustees of the university announced last week.

Registration for freshmen at both the Orono and Brunswick campuses will now start on Tuesday morning, September 30. Registration for upperclass students on the Orono campus will start at 1:30 p. m., Wednesday, October 1, and continue through Saturday noon, October 4. Transfer students, except those entering the School of Education, will register Saturday morning, October 4.

All classes will begin on Monday, October 6, at 7:45 a. m.

Classes will continue in session one week later next June. Commencement exercises will be postponed from June 13 to June 20.

Dr. Arthur A. Hauck, president of the university, explained that the change in the opening date of the university would give time to complete the two dormitories at the northern end of the campus, move books and other equipment from the old to the new library, add finishing touches to the temporary classroom building at the rear of Officials of the athletic department pointed out that the delayed opening would not interfere with the varsity football schedule, since the first game of the season will be played with Rhode Island State at Kingston, R. Both the Orono and Brunswick campuses will operate under the same school calendar this year. About 4,000 students will study at the Orono campus and 800 at Brunswick.

Value of Intrigue

NEW YORK—Costumed in long flowing gowns, the waitresses at the Sheraton Lounge here are selling male hearts—and eyes—agony, for the skirts of the gowns are transparent! At first glance the boys are impressed with just beautiful girls garbed in evening dress, but as the glamorites pass the lights, glorious pairs of legs are revealed enhanced by the flow of the sheer black skirts. Evidence that intrigue is greater than exposure, the hotel has had to arrange to send the girls home nightly by cab to avoid the numerous hotel-door johnnies who gather 'round.

Searching Immigrants

HAIFA, PALESTINE—(Sound-photo)—A British trooper searches through the baggage of a Jewish immigrant who holds his child in his arms. Note how interested the child is in the trooper's actions as he goes through the immigrant's belongings in search of contraband. In the background can be seen the immigrants lining the deck of the ship "S.S. Fourteen Victims of Ash Bridge" which was intercepted by the British navy off Haifa, and taken to port along with another vessel which was intercepted named the "S.S. Return to Zion". There were no outbreaks by the immigrants when the British boarded the ships. The Jewish immigrants were then trans-shipped to Cyprus and not back to the countries of embarkation.

Presidential Travel Is Major Project

Chief Executive Zealously Guarded by Secret Service

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON. — When President Truman finally announced that he was going to Brazil, he was immediately asked if he contemplated any trips across continental United States. He answered in the negative.

A reporter piped up: "This year or next year?"

"THIS year," the President replied.

That gave the White House press and radio conference a short interlude of laughter. For the reason that whenever a president is forced to drop his role of chief executive to assume the functions of candidate, it is funny. Frequently it isn't funny for the candidate, especially when he has been used to the respect spontaneously and (except in election years) almost universally, tendered his office.

A presidential trip may be, in many cases, fun for the President, but it isn't much fun for a lot of other people.

Not that all Presidents have had easy traveling.

It was an ordeal for the early heads of the nation just to get home in the stagecoach and tavern days.

President Garfield was shot in a railroad station; McKinley was killed by a half-mad anarchist on a trip to the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo; Harding died in San Francisco on his way back from a swing-around that had taken him to Vancouver, Canada; Wilson suffered a stroke in his Pullman; Theodore Roosevelt was wounded while he addressed a meeting on a visit to Milwaukee.

Furthermore, it has been recently revealed by the head of the secret service, Mike Reilly, in his book "Reilly of the White House," that Franklin Roosevelt, who disliked air travel, nearly cracked up in Malta, and might have been assassinated in a park in Miami had he not leaped out of his car to take a telegram (Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago was killed and four other persons wounded).

Stayed Within Nation's Borders

Up to Franklin Roosevelt's time, Taft was the most traveled of presidents, and in 1901 worried all the constitutionalists (unfamiliar with the Constitution) by visiting the Canal Zone. However, he was scrupulously careful to stay on board the American warship which had been considered an unwritten law since George Washington's time the had refused to enter Rhode Island until it was admitted to the Union; that a president in office couldn't leave the country. When Woodrow Wilson went to Paris and Vice President Thomas Marshall had to preside at cabinet meetings, the vice president made it clear he was officiating only at the request of Wilson and that he didn't consider Wilson's leaving the country vacated the presidency.

Travel has become a president must, and Mr. Truman's trip to South America is just routine.

But it is complicated routine for a whole army of people.

What these people do is little known to the public, especially the secret service. One out of every 10 of our presidents has been assassinated up to the time congress turned the job of protecting the chief executive over to the secret service. Since then no president has been assassinated.

Their (the secret service's) is a heartbreaking job, and never have the details been so thoroughly revealed as in the disclosure of some of his former colleagues as by Mike Reilly in the book I mentioned.

Of course in wartime the job was vastly more complicated, and the army and navy worked closely with the secret service. A special air raid alert system was designed, Reilly says "to protect FDR anywhere in the United States."

When a spotter or watcher, either civilian or military, spotted an airplane he or she was unable to identify "any place from Greenland to the Straits of Magellan," the information was radioed immediately to the army air force headquarters at Mitchell Field, N. Y.

The information was immediately evaluated and conveyed by radio and land line to the secret service communication system where men were standing a 24 hour watch. This system tied together Mitchell Field, Bolling Field, the homes, offices and automobiles of various secret service agents, field offices throughout the country, all secret service mobile units, the President's train, Shantling-La, and the President's room at Hyde Park.

President Kept Informed Constantly

But keeping the President alive is only one activity. Keeping him in touch with his job is another.

Once when a bullying congress demanded of President Grant which if any of his duties he performed in Washington, he replied that his business and where he did it was his own affair. Now a president's out-of-town business is a lot of people's affairs.

In wartime this signal corps detail had the mission of speeding the President's top-secret communications "from the highest level conference tables to installations in the field."

"Today," as Major McNally puts it, "wherever the President travels, the White House signal detachment continues its task of weaving deftly an intricate communications net, which enables the commander-in-chief (and, he might have added, a traveling candidate) to keep himself constantly informed and in touch with the nation."

This work of weaving this "communications net" is an exciting story too long to recount here, but let me quote Major McNally briefly to show how continuous communication was maintained when President Roosevelt made one of his frequent trips to Hyde Park.

"A 50-watt frequency modulation station was modified and installed on the secret service car attached to the presidential train. Army vehicles, radio equipped, were spotted at strategically plotted points along the route between Washington and Poughkeepsie, so that the train was in constant touch with the White House all the way. Another FM radio link was installed in the old stable on the President's estate at Hyde Park. By means of a direct telephone line to Washington and frequency modulation radio, the White House was kept informed of the President's whereabouts at all times."

The speed with which messages could be dispatched and answers received was astounding. When Winston Churchill was making his second visit to Hyde Park, he and the President who were keen competitors as well as close collaborators decided to make a speed test on the communications facilities. Each sent identical messages to Australia over the respective British and United States facilities. The President had an answer in less than two hours; the Prime Minister got his the next day.

CAUTION TO THE WINDS

Sharp Rise in Buying Noted

Swinging sharply away from its previous cautious attitude of economy-minded discrimination, the U. S. buying public has launched itself on a relatively liberal purchasing spree.

Virtually all fields of trade have reported a clear-cut trend away from passive waiting for lower prices, and purchases are increasing all over the country.

The change has given rise to a certain amount of alarm over the possibility of a new inflation spiral which may develop as a result of indiscriminate buying. It has become the subject of much discussion among business leaders, bankers and economists, some of whom express concern that the movement might acquire runaway proportions.

"We are watching developments from day to day," said a government economist, "hoping that it will taper off before it becomes a violent spiral that can end only in a serious reversal."

It is generally agreed that the movement began with the renewed wave of price increases that followed the boom in coal prices and mine wages. It has gained momentum ever since.

Consumers apparently have given up hope that any material reduction in prices will occur within the reasonable future and are going ahead to purchase merchandise which they long have needed. Many merchants who curtailed their inventories a year ago are placing orders to replenish their stocks.

As a result of the widespread buying trend, previous opinions that industry and business were in for at least slight setbacks in the last half of this year are being revised. Current forecasts are optimistic concerning high levels of business activity during the third and fourth quarters.

Belief now is that prices generally will move upward, or at least hold their present heights, until well into next year. Cash remains abundant, and the influx of large amounts of money from veterans' terminal leave bonds and state bonuses will be added contributing factors to the inflationary trend.

Hint American Aid Plan; Truman Acts for DP's

THE AMERICAS:

"We must reject an encroachment upon the fundamental rights of the state. I am confident that we all agree that the state exists for man, not man for the state—and that we shall not limit upon the freedom of expression of men throughout the world."

Thus, in his first address before the Inter-American conference at Petropolis, Brazil, U. S. Secretary of State George Marshall issued a reaffirmation of democratic principles in the western hemisphere and then bulwarked his expression of idealism with specific assurances of U. S. economic aid to Latin America.

He told the delegates that the U. S. government "will continue to take up economic questions with its sister republics and seek a sound basis for practical cooperation."

CRYSTAL BALL: Next President

General Douglas MacArthur will be the next president of the United States.

That, at least, is the occult prediction of a 75-year-old Japanese fortune teller, Kakudo Tomoka, who eulogized: "MacArthur has a glorious future in store for him."

Tomoka, who is said to have a record of several accurate predictions, placed the general on a plane with Mohandas Ghandi in the field of social welfare.

"There presently are two living men who have succeeded in realizing a peaceful revolution," he said. "They are MacArthur and Ghandi. But, then, Ghandi's mission is over. And MacArthur has his most glorious task to accomplish for the world in the future."

It was not immediately known whether MacArthur would use Tomoka's recommendation as a plank in his platform if he runs in 1948.

SURPLUS: Budget Review

President Truman's budget business made big news again when the chief executive (1) forecast a record treasury surplus next June of nearly five billion dollars, and (2) hurt Republican feelings by telling the nation that congress trimmed the 1947 budget estimates by only 1.5 billion dollars.

His mid-year budget review estimated tax receipts this year at $41,667,000,000, which is 2.1 billion dollars more than any previous forecast.

Mr. Truman made his announcement coincidentally with a bureau of labor report which indicated that the U. S. far from being in for a business depression, can look forward to a period of prosperity continuing "indefinitely."

Marshall at Rio

"... the state exists for man ..."

That was interpreted as meaning that the U. S. is willing to help solve Latin America's economic problems through a series of bi-lateral pacts. There was also a hint that the big northern neighbor is counting on sending down its capital.

BUDGET REVIEW

President Truman's budget business made big news again when the chief executive (1) forecast a record treasury surplus next June of nearly five billion dollars, and (2) hurt Republican feelings by telling the nation that congress trimmed the 1947 budget estimates by only 1.5 billion dollars.

His mid-year budget review estimated tax receipts this year at $41,667,000,000, which is 2.1 billion dollars more than any previous forecast.

Mr. Truman made his announcement coincidentally with a bureau of labor report which indicated that the U. S., far from being in for a business depression, can look forward to a period of prosperity continuing "indefinitely."

HEADLINERS

IN DALLAS . . . Mrs. Warren J. Woodard, 24, housewife, got up in arms about legs.

She organized the "Little Below the Knee Club" for women who oppose the long skirt now in style. The girls organized a parade and anked through Dallas streets to give emphasis to their protest.

IN LAS VEGAS . . . Senator McCarthy (Rep., Wis.) put the bite on congress for its "do nothing" attitude toward veterans.

Congress, said he, "did foully by our disabled veterans, their widows and dependents."

IN BALMORAL SCOTLAND . . . Princess Margaret Rose of England, just turned 17, received as a birthday present her first military title—colonel-in-chief of the Highland Light Infantry.

CRYSTAL BALL: Next President

General Douglas MacArthur will be the next president of the United States.

That, at least, is the occult prediction of a 75-year-old Japanese fortune teller, Kakudo Tomioka, who eulogized: "MacArthur has a glorious future in store for him."

Tomioka, who is said to have a record of several accurate predictions, placed the general on a plane with Mohandas Gandhi in the field of social welfare.

"There presently are two living men who have succeeded in realizing a peaceful revolution," he said. "They are MacArthur and Gandhi. But then, Gandhi's mission is over. And MacArthur has his most glorious task to accomplish for the world in the future."

Budget Pointers

There's a tendency to go along with the crowd when it comes to spending money, especially on food, instead of seeing what can be done to stretch the food dollar. Getting the most out of the food dollar does not, fortunately, mean that we have to tighten our belts; it just means a bit of maneuvering.

In the midst of soaring food costs, there's plenty of help for the woman who wants it, and today's recipes are designed to give you plenty of food for thought. Give your family a change of menu, and give the budget a chance to stay within its limits at the same time.

There are several general rules to follow: Buy wisely; don't overbuy and let food go to waste; serve and cook whatever you have properly, and don't toss away good leftovers.

For main dishes you can call on good quality proteins for front line duty; they're cheaper than the expensive cuts of meat and do just as much for you.

Macaroni-Cheese Souffle.

(Serves 6)
1 cup uncooked macaroni
1 cup sweet cream or condensed milk
½ cup butter or substitute
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ green pepper, minced
1 medium green onion, minced
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper
4 eggs, separated

Cook macaroni in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain; scald milk and add other ingredients. Stir in beaten yolks, then fold in stiffly beaten whites. Turn into a greased casserole and set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for one hour. Serve with mushroom or pimiento cream sauce.

Eggs Foo Young.

(Serves 6)
8 eggs, beaten
1 No. 2 can bean sprouts
3 tablespoons chopped green pepper
½ cup shredded onion
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ pound mushrooms, sliced, if desired

Add salt and pepper to eggs and beat well. Add remaining ingredients. Taste and add more seasoning if desired. For each cake, measure out ½ cup of the mixture and use 1 tablespoon of fat for frying. Pour mixture into skillet, leveling vegetables evenly over the surface of the cake. Brown on both sides, turning once. About five minutes are required to cook each cake. Serve with soy sauce.

Rice Nests With Egg.

(Serves 6)
½ cup butter or substitute
1½ cups cooked rice
8 slices bacon
6 eggs
Salt and pepper

Butter a baking dish and place rice in it, forming nests out of it with a spoon. Broil the bacon and place one strip around each nest, holding it in place with a toothpick. Break an egg in each nest and sprinkle with salt and pepper and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until the white of the egg is cooked but the yolk tender. This will take five to six minutes.

Among the kind-to-the-budget items is corned beef hash that comes canned and is ready-to-serve. It's easily dressed up in pinwheels of baking powder biscuit dough, and certain to be a favorite with the men of the house.

*Corned Beef Hash Rolls.

(Serves 4)
1 cup sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
¾ to 1 cup milk
1 1-pound can corned beef hash
Mix dry ingredients together and sift. Work in shortening. Add liquid gradually, mixing to a soft dough. Roll to a thickness of about one-fourth inch. Spread corned beef hash on dough; roll and cut in four parts. Place on a greased cookie sheet (lifting with a pancake turner). Bake in a moderately hot (400-degree) oven for 30 minutes.

For an easy vegetable, take a can of green beans and make this:

*Sweet Sour Green Beans.

(Serves 4 to 5)
2 strips bacon
1 small onion
1 No. 2 can green beans
2 teaspoons sugar
Salt and pepper
¼ cup vinegar

Cut the bacon in half inch pieces. Brown lightly with diced onion. Add liquid drained from green beans. Cook down to about ½ cup. Add remaining ingredients and beans. Heat and serve.

If you want to keep the budget trimmed, don't splurge on desserts.

*Date-Nut Custard Pudding.

(Serves 6)

1 egg
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of cinnamon
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 8-ounce can date-nut bread
Beat egg slightly, add milk, sugar and salt. Cook in a double boiler until mixture coats the spoon. Remove from hot water and stir in lemon rind and cinnamon. Cut date-nut bread into pieces and combine with custard. Chill.

Here's a cookie that will take care of leftover egg whites and bread crumbs. Serve it with fruit for a nice, light dessert:

Pecan Brownies.

(Makes 3 dozen)

1 egg whites
1 cup brown sugar
¼ teaspoon maple flavoring
1 cup pecans, chopped
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
Beat egg whites until stiff, add sugar and flavoring. Stir well, then fold in nuts and crumbs. Shape into small balls, place on a greased baking pan and bake in a slow (325-degree) oven for about 20 minutes.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lima beans take on new character if they are well seasoned with salt and pepper plus a crumbly of crisply fried bacon.

A good relish with sliced leftover meat? Mix together 1 cup of apple sauce, ½ cup of whipped cream and ¼ cup grated or pureed horseradish.

Do up your gingerbread tight by serving it with a whipped cream topping. Use two tablespoons of molasses folded in 1 cup of the cream when whipped.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

JOSEPH COTTON may be driven to writing a mystery story centered around his swimming pool. Of course, there was no mystery about the time he missed his sedan, and next morning found it parked in the deep end of the pool; that could be laid to brakes that didn't hold. But when he returned to Hollywood after five months in New York, making "Portrait of Jenny" with Jennifer Jones, the swimming pool held the following items—one roller skate, one shoulder-type diving helmet, and one pogo stick. A one-legged skater who skates under water, an amateur diver, a pogolst—those are his characters so far.

Myrna Loy's co-starring appearance with Cary Grant in "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer" worked out so well that she'll report at RKO in mid-September to make "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House" with him.

Paramount is really going to lay it on for C. B. DeMille's "Unconquered," starring Gary Cooper and Paulette Goddard. The advertising campaign, which will extend through November, will be the biggest and most extensive ever given a Paramount picture. All calculated to make the public rush to see it during the general Thanksgiving Day week release.

Bing Crosby's wife and sons thought he ought to do it, so he did; he's ordered 16-millimeter prints of his 30 motion pictures, from "The Big Broadcast of 1932" to "The Emperor Waltz" and "Road to Rio." He says it'll be fine for the boys, who never saw some of the stars who appeared with him—W. C. Fields, for instance, who was in "Mississippi" with Crosby.

With "Duel in the Sun" grossing more than ten million dollars so far, other studios are following where David O. Selznick led. MGM likes the idea of showing "The Hucksters" simultaneously in hundreds of theaters, and 20th Century-Fox will do it with "The Captains From Castille" and "Forever Amber." Ten million dollars is a nice mark to shoot at!

When Abigail Adams was under contract to MGM she spent her training period correcting her Southern accent—she hails from Greenville, S. C. She made a screen test with Lee Bowman the other day, and as a result signed a contract with Columbia. She has had excellent experience—you've been hearing her on the air in radio dramas with Orson Welles.

On the eve of releasing "Song of Love," MGM asked the Motion Picture Research Bureau to poll a cross-section of the public on the ten greatest love stories. "Gone with the Wind" led, with "Romeo and Juliet" second.

When Gary Moore decided to go it alone, after five seasons with Jimmy Durante, nobody knew what he would do. He landed the Phil Baker spot on "Take It or Leave It" because his audition records were exceptionally good.

Because New Orleans jazz says musically what the makers of RKO's "Crossfire" wanted to say visually, Kid Ory's Creole Jazz Band was engaged to record two numbers; they aren't seen in the picture, just heard.

It's said Boris Karloff wants to leave ABC's "Lights Out" because his roles are too grisly. But Luther Adler is withdrawing from NBC's "Mystery Without Murder" because his roles are too gentle for him!

ODDS AND ENDS—John Lill, the father in Paramount's "Aldrich" series, has a top role in the Bob Hope-Lane Russell "The Paleface." Guy Madison gave Gail Russell an archery job which he had made; now he's giving her archery lessons. . . . Douglas Kennedy is a popular leading man for screen tests at Warner's; so far this year he has made tests with 10 girls, 8 of whom were successful. . . . The accepted average is 1 out of 15. . . . Arthur Godfrey, whose "Talent Scouts" program is flourishing, has had at many as 80 applicants at one time and kept them all happy.

New Typewriter Eliminates Chance of Spelling Errors

A recently patented electric typewriter eliminates the possibility of misspelling words, says Collier's. Visible through a slot is a series of small wheels, each of which contains all characters and revolves, spelling out one line of words at a time as the corresponding characters on the keyboard are struck.

After the operator checks her spelling, she presses a button which causes the line to be typed automatically on the paper while she writes the next one.

Errors may be corrected individually or by clearing all wheels and retyping the whole line.

The Golden Text is: "God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness" (Genesis 1:26).

The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness, For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known" (1 Corinthians 13:12).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following selections from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man, the compound idea of infinite Spirit, the spiritual image and likeness of God; the full representation of Mind. The true idea of man, as the reflection of the infinite Principle. The visible, universe and material man are the poor counterfeit of the invisible universe and spiritual man" (pages 501: 5-7 and 337: 20-24).

Collapsing Town
WELCH, W. VA.—(Soundphoto)—Inogen Thompson, left, and Ogal Sutherland have a stroll on the buckled pavements of Welch as sections of the town's streets started sinking due to a mysterious shifting of the earth. While the town's 6,000 inhabitants were fearful that their homes may be destroyed, huge cracks appeared in several large buildings. Authorities believe that an underground river is causing the earth movement. Another theory is that coal mining has weakened the city's foundations.
